Cat at the win-dow, bird out - si - de, doesn't see a rea - son he should hi - de.

Perched on the feed - er, chow-ing dow - n, not a-fraid of an - y cat in town.

"Grr," says the cat with whisk-ers twitch-ing, up on the tab - le, tail a-switch-ing,

"If I could on - ly 'scape the do - or, would-n't see that bold chick-a - dee no more!"

Out creeps the mouse a - long the wa - ll, looking for the bird-seed we let fa - ll.

Hopes that the cat won't turn a - round, and back in - to his hole all safe and sound.
